

"All is Well That Ends Well"

Along with dyspepsia comes nervousness, sleeplessness and general ill health. Why? Because a disordered stomach does not permit the food to be assimilated and carried to the blood. On the other hand, the blood is charged with poisons which come from this disordered digestion. In turn, the nerves are not fed on good, red blood and we see those symptoms of nervous breakdown. It is not head work that does it, but poor stomach work. With poor thin blood the body is not protected against the attack of germs of grip—bronchitis—consumption. Fortify the body now with Short Courses are Popular.

During the past winter 308 students attended the various Short Courses given by the Missouri College of Agriculture. These students came from 87 counties of Missouri and from 5 other states. They were enrolled in the Two Year Winter Course, in the Short Course for Women, the Short Course in Dairying, and the Special Poultry Course. The last three courses are new, and the attendance was relatively small.

The first Short Course in Agriculture at the Missouri College was offered seventeen years ago. In this period of time 1880 students, representing practically every county in the state, have attended some of these courses.

In 1909 the Two-Year Winter Course, consisting of two winters of fourteen weeks each, was organized. Each winter is divided into two terms of seven weeks, and each term is a unit by itself. Students who complete the work of all four terms are given a certificate. One of the most satisfactory indications of progress in this course is the fact that each year a larger number of students return to complete the course and receive certificates. In the spring of 1911 seven students completed the course. At the close of the present session 33 students will receive certificates of graduation.

Another Boost for Poultry.

The Poultry Department at the University of Missouri has been informed that the Food Research Laboratory of the Bureau of Chemistry heretofore located at Nashville, Tennessee, and under the direction of Doctor Mary E. Pennington and Professor H. C. Pierce, is to be removed to Sedalia, Missouri. The work of this laboratory consists of studying the marketing of eggs and poultry from the producer to the consumer.

There is a great need of such work in Missouri. A conservative estimate places the loss in eggs during a single year at $3,000,000. A large percentage of this loss is borne by the farmer and the loss is due to the average low quality of eggs and the consequent low prices.

One of the first steps will be to organize the dealers in the State to buy eggs on a quality basis. The elimination of bad eggs at the receiving station, where it has been tried in this state, results in an increase in the price of eggs of three cents per dozen. This means that the producer of poor eggs pays the penalty and the producer of good eggs reaps the reward. It is only on this basis that the egg industry in Missouri can approach its possibilities and Missouri is to be congratulated on having the laboratory within its boundaries.

How a Drunkard Cured Himself.

The American Magazine has been offering prizes for the best letters on the subject "Overcoming Bad Habits." The following letter from a man who cured himself from drunkenness won second prize. It is published in the March number.

"Seventeen years I had the drink habit; eight, the drink habit had me.

"If during the last six years of that quarter-century I was sober once, I do not remember it. Day by day, I added to the strength of my weakness until the disease—and disease it had in truth become—brought me, nerve-racked, unstrung, broken, palsied, to the verge of delirium and disgraceful death.

"Then, when without brandy and ever more brandy, I could not lift food or drink to my lips, I took the fag end of a misspent life that remained, and made a man of it.

"How? Not day by day, hour by hour, as the habit grew; but instant by instant; with every instant a poignant agony body and soul. Moment by moment, I postponed the drinking of the brandy carried in my pocket, though every moment of those first days was a suffering such as I trust may never again fall to my lot. Every fiber of my being, distressed, out, 'Brandy! Brandy! If ever you needed it, you need it now!' But always my answer was, 'Not yet. In a second or two perhaps, but not yet.'

"Many times during that first terrible day, and the scarcely less dreadful days that followed, I asked myself if I could live another hour—a half-hour—fifteen minutes—without brandy. I did not know. A second? Perhaps. I was not sure. My heart fluttered; beat fast; beat slow; threatened to stop; and, several times, did stop—or so it seemed to me—for more than a minute, while I grew cold and numb, and broke out in clammy sweat at every pore. Time and again I felt myself on the very threshold of death. Flesh and blood, I thought then, surely could endure no more, and life persist.

"At last, weakening, as I now marvel that I did not weaken sooner, I drew forth the flask that seemed to hold my only hope of life, opened it; with two hands, shakily raised it to my lips.

"Then came the thought, 'If I must die of brandy, I can die without more, if not, I can live without any.' And again I said, 'Not yet. In another moment, maybe; but not yet.'

"That was six years ago. After the first month, I threw away my flask—and have tasted no intoxicant since.

"My moment-by-moment method was based upon the thought that all of life is measured out in fractions of a second; and that, for the brief present fraction that is all the life we have, any torture is endurable.

"The means of instant gratification of the craving were kept at hand as, without such provision, the second-to-second character of the cure is lost and that lost nothing remains. With it, and with a determination to succeed, any man, I believe, can control and conquer my habit."

is just as great an improvement over the old style carbon lamp as electric light is over a coal oil lamp—a 40 watt Mazda lamp gives 32 candle power and consumes 20 per cent less current than the old style 16 candle power carbon lamp.

Mazda lamps are not only more economical, but they give a brighter and better light.
